

The following series of works focus on research about painting as physical body. The starting focus is all about material and its opportunities. Painting is physical object full of its elements, a body with its internal organs. It appears through psychical and mental space, which are created by itself through process. Painting is collective mixture of powers, their meeting point. Whether is colour, texture or any physical aspect, the process is always trying to reach to it. Painting progress is like never-ending circle. The power kind like explosive volcano which destroys and creates and continues to do that. It is mark of physical shape of tumorous power. An opportunity. Experiment. The process of trying to reach somewhere and to discover. It marks the collective material of physical thoughts. The act of doing. The forming power, which appears through colour and ends as material. Painting is and can be...
